

College of Nursing-Fort Lauderdale

Lynne Bryant, EdD, RN, CNE

Dr. Bryant received her undergraduate degree from the University of Maryland, and her graduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She completed her Doctor of Education degree at Florida International University.

One of the wonderful aspects of being a nurse is that it opens the door to a varied career. Dr. Bryant has had the opportunity to practice nursing in many different areas and positions. Not only has she held positions as a staff nurse, manager, researcher and educator, she has practiced in critical care, large teaching hospitals, small community hospitals, research units, diploma and community college programs and the university setting.

Dr. Bryant's interests include educational research and evidence-based practice. She co-authored an article about integrating multiculturalism into nursing curricula in the Journal of Professional Nursing and a chapter about teaching evidence-based practice, in Teaching Nursing: The Art and Science. Most recently, she co-authored an article about the development and testing of an instrument to measure the informatics knowledge, skills, and attitudes of entry-level nursing students. The article was published in the Online Journal of Nursing Informatics. Dr. Bryant has presented several topics about education at various international and national conferences. She has received two grants to conduct educational research.

Dr. Bryant has been a faculty member at NSU since 2008, and has developed many of the education courses in the MSN and PhD programs. She is a member of several College of Nursing and University committees. Dr. Bryant is a Certified Nurse Educator (CNE).
