

College of Nursing

---

Susan Holland, PhD, MSN, RN

Susan Holland received her undergraduate degree from Edison Community College. She earned a Bachelor of Science in Nursing and a Master of Science in Nursing from the University of Central Florida. She is currently a Ph.D candidate at the University of Phoenix, College of Nursing.

Ms Holland began her nursing career as a cardiac nurse, but the majority of her career has been in the maternal and child area of nursing. Ms. Holland has had the opportunity to practice nursing in a variety of settings including public health, school health, home health and administration. She has been an educator since 2007 and has experience in program management and accreditation.

Assistant Professor Holland has been with the Fort Myers NSU Campus since January of 2013 with a specialty in Obstetrics and Pediatrics. Professor Holland is interested in research related to the development of clinical judgment, the effects of simulation, and factors that predict NCLEX success.