

College of Nursing-Fort Lauderdale

Blondel Martin, PhD, RN

My career in health care began in 1996 after graduating from Broward Community College, now Broward College. After practicing as a nurse for several years, I returned to the academic setting and obtained a Baccalaureate of Science in Nursing Degree from the University of Phoenix in 2006. With the desire to educate other nurses, I returned to the University of Phoenix and completed my Master's of Science Degree with an emphasis in nursing education in 2008. In 2013, I completed my Doctor of Philosophy in Nursing at Barry University in Miami, FL.

In 2013, I joined the nursing faculty at Nova Southeastern University and currently teach in the entry level nursing program. With the desire to care for others and to educate young aspiring nurses, I have now combined my experiences and passion to fulfill my dream.
